GIANTS BREAK LOSING STREAK

Cincinnati Proves Goat in Long and Tiresome Hard-Hitting Contest.

M'GRAWITES NEVER HEADED

Scoring Starts in First Inning and Continues Throughout Entire Game.

New York. May 6.—The Giants broke their long string of defeats by taking the opener from Cincinnati to-day 2 to 5 after a tiresome fight, in which both teams fattened their batting averages.

The locals started scoring in the first, and were never headed. In the fourth Tesreau's terrific three-bagger, with the bags clogged, brought in three runs, but the pitcher was himself caught on the next play. In the next toning Sugge started things with a triple, but was caught at the plate by Snodgrams's pietty throw.

Artic Shafer was the batting star of the day, getting a clean record out of four times up. Herzog and Merkle were tied for second honors with three hits each. Manager Tinker was the headliner for the visitors. The score:

SUPERBAS STILL WIN

Brooklyn. May 6.—Brooklyn fans changed their cry of "Brst division to "champs" today when the Dodgers took the first of the series from the Cubs by a \(^1\text{to}\) 3 score. Ragon was sent against the visitors, and for seven innings had them at his mercy, sllowing but two hits. He was then retired in favor of Nap Rucker, who allowed but one.

In the second, two passes and Ragon's error in failing to cover first, filled the bases. Zimmerman scored on a passed ball, and Archer's single pushed in two more. The Cubs did not threaten to acore again during the game.

In the Wake of the Game By GUS MALBERT

Introducing the New York Yankees of the Virginia League-Newport News.

James West, than whom there is no more thanwhomer in the wide, wide, world, once told us in absolute confidence that there was but one care he had in life, and that was the particular sort of menu fitting at a banquet given in honor of the conquering Newport News avalanche. Not for oodles of spendable specie would we twit James anent his ball club, but long before the wire had been reached we gave it as our opinion that Newport News would have to arrange for a few ball players before that hustling city could hope for leadership, or even an average showing in the Boatwright

To date, sixteen games have been pushed aside in the gallop down the trail. Not one trifling blot have the shipmaking contingent put on the book. Not in all the history of baseball in Virginia, and that goes back nearly as far as the history of the game itself, has any club representing any city made such a record. Two managers have been toppled over, and now we are introduced to the Matthews regime. Paul Davis was let out before he arrived, and Matty Broderick was given the slip just two days ago. Now Harry Matthews is to try his hand. From accounts, the backlots of Washington are being raked with a fine-tooth comb for ball players. Six have already been signed, if we add the name of Gill Cassidy, who was caught in the net yesterday.

But that isn't going to put Newport News in the race. It is probably the best the people down there can do right now, and these young fellows will put a lot of pep into the fight, but they are not going to win ball games against clubs composed for the most part of experienced men. It is going to take real money to build up the Newport News cçaft—money invested in ball players of known ability. If President Horwitz and our good friend, Jimmie West, are not after pushing their dollars through a sieve, they may as well stop this attempt of building a winning club this year out of amateurs. If amateurs are what they are after, they are passing up some good bets by overlooking Richmond. They let Jimmie Tennant get away from them, and right now there can be had in Richmond one of the best young catchers in the game. It matters not that he is not quite so good as some other teams' backstops, he is better thany anything Newport News has. And all of this criticism is made in the kindliest spirit, in the hope that Newport News will get the kind of ball club the good sports of that town deserve.

It's a case of hustle from now out. There is no reason to give up hope yet. The season is entirely too young. Neither is there time to keep making futile attempts to build a ball club out of material that has been laying loose all of these months without any one grabbing it. If they are willing to take chances, to gamble against almost prohibitive odds, that policy will do. But Frank Chance, one of the gamest, pluckiest, headiest and wisest generals the game has ever known, has come to the conclusion that he can't build a ball club without some real material. All of his brains and his pluck and his energy have gone to waste on a lot of youngsters who can't imbibe the knowledge he has on hand to give out. And he started with one or two stars. Newport News must take heed from this experience.

We are called upon to make a correction. Elmore Heins, the money counter We are called upon to make a correction. Elmore Heins, the money counter of the Roanoke club, accuses us of making a mistake regarding the Roanoke drawing power. His message, which refers to what we wrote last Sunday, says: "Your article about attendance here being at low ebb is erronsous. We had the second best opening day we have had in eight seasons, and our attendance at the six games played at home was three times as large as the first six games last season. There is lots of interest here, and we are going to have a good season. Would like for you to correct your article in regards to this. Despite a street car strike, our crowds have exceeded our expectations. Our town will hold its own in regards to attendance and quality of basshall. This afternoon at Broad Street Park one of the fastest, and most exciting games, of the season will be played. John Marshall High School will cross tats with Fork Union Academy. The teams play a series of games every year, and the rivalry between the schools is very keen.

As this is the first game between the two schools this season, the stucents of the local institution will turn out in a body to see the Marshallites on to victory. Fork Union has been showing up exceptionally strong, having been successful in the games they have played here with other teams, while the local lads have earned a reputation for hard hitting and fast fielding. The game promises to be full of interest.

The award of Ray Blausser to Keokuk in the Central Association may be some from the Central Association and the Lad by purchase. Blausser has proved a valuable man. Charlie Shaffer wanted him, but couldn't be pay the price, after which he went to Roanoke. Now that he has been awarded to Keokuk, negotiations will be started over again, presuming, of course, that the Blausser in Roanfoke is the one in question, and we presume that he is, since he came from the Central Association, and is second baseman, the position that league occupied.
